A Day in the Life of a TALGV Dog

by Rusty - as told to Jennifer Symons

Welcome to the dog side of TALGV! I've been asked to lead you through a day in the life of a TALGV dog and I'm happy to obey. I'm a dog; I like having a job.

A TALGV morning starts with lights on, doors opening, and the arrival of today's pack of humans. One of them comes into my run with a leash. "Sit," she says. It's the training game. We play it every day at TALGV, and with all that practice, I know "sit," "stay," "come," and usually "leave it." Right now, I just want to go on my morning walk, and I do mean right now!

My run has an outside room—I sit in the sun a lot—but these walks are great. I like the open space, sniffing stuff on the ground and in the air, and sharing this exercise with a person. Oh good, she's sitting down. This is my favorite part: She's giving me a massage. Sure, she's looking in my ears and checking my paws, but she's rubbing my belly and shoulders, too. In dog tones, I'm singing, "Heaven....I'm in heaven..."

TALGV has great room service. When we get back from our walk, my run is clean, the water is fresh and today there's a new toy! In just a short time, yes, here it is: Brunch. Meals here are served two times a day like clockwork. (Humans love their routines.)

When mid morning arrives, so do the visitors. Sometimes people stop at my window to talk to me. There are two now. What? They want to meet me? Really? I'm not the cutest or the youngest....but here they come. Hey, they smell friendly.

A man and a woman, and they both want to walk with me. As they put on the leash, the woman pets my nose and says its beautiful. How nice of her to notice.

On the walk, the TALGV person asks them to bring their dog in to meet me, too. The man whispers that they'll see me tomorrow. Are these my new people?

Back inside, the day changes again. Visitors are gone and TALGV people are doing paperwork and more cleanup. (They're very fond of cleaning here.) Time for peace and quiet, and supper will come soon. I can almost smell it now.

You've probably heard that dogs detect all kinds of things just by smell. I can confirm that. For instance, yesterday I smelled fear next door. My new neighbor had been lost, hurt and hungry. TALGV people checked him nose to tail to see what he needed, gave him medicine and even a b-a-t-h! Today, he smells safe.

My neighbor to the west doesn't talk much. She's here because her owner died, and still has the scent of sad. I understand. I came here for the same reason, so I know sad. The TALGV people and I will help her feel less lonely.

A little further down, the smell is of new—downy fur, soft food and lots of poop. Puppies!

This day is almost done. I'm resting on my soft bed inside for now. Later, I'll go to my outside room and sleep under the stars. Maybe I'll dream about those people who visited me today. Do you know the scent of hope?

Groundbreaking 2013

The Animal League of Green Valley celebrated the New Year by breaking ground for its expansion project.

The much needed space will provide a new cat wing, an adoption counseling room, a multipurpose room for volunteer training and Outreach education, and computer work stations.

Construction is scheduled for completion near the end of July. The present cat rooms will be converted to dog kennels and a new outdoor dog area is also planned.

TALGV continues to grow and improve with the support of our community and our many donors.

Foster Program Enriches Lives

by Jan Noll

Gigi, Magic, Daisy 4, Guy, Tyson, Buddha, Curly....this list of names of some of man's best friends goes on and on. They are just a few of TALGV's dogs that have benefited from the current foster care program.

In November 2012, Jean Davis recruited Ed Zimmermann to reenergize TALGV's foster program. The need was immediate as the shelter had to find homes for dogs that were to be displaced due to the upcoming construction.

Ed asked Jan Noll to be his co-coordinator and together they took on the job. In a short time the plan was perfected, and with an enthusiastic team of volunteer foster parents the program was in full swing at the start of construction; placing 19 dogs in foster homes.

This would not have been possible without the generosity of the families that offered their hearts, their time and their homes to these dogs. Congratulations and thank you to each family that volunteered.

When a dog is placed in a foster home, change happens. Not only is the dog out of a kennel and in a home where his needs are met, but he blossoms with the love and attention he receives in the home. The foster parents are asked to enforce the dog's positive behaviors, help with socialization, work on some basic training, and help reduce any anxiety the dog may have developed during his time at the shelter. Many of the dogs actually become more adoptable with the diligent concern received. To date, more than ten of the foster dogs have been adopted.

Foster families also find their lives enriched by caring for and meeting the needs of the dog. Many have commented on how they enjoy walking, playing and spending time with a dog who offers unconditional love and only asks for affection, time and, of course, two meals a day!

The foster program continues to need foster homes, especially for the larger dogs. The need will still be there even after construction is finished. Please contact TALGV if you have room in your home and heart to join this worthwhile program.

Thank You!

The Benefits of Adopting an Adult Cat

Veda is 15 years young.

Kittens will always be popular, and most have no trouble attracting admirers. But for the abandoned, forgotten, and heartbroken adult cats, you just might be their last chance to have the love and warmth of a home where they can live out their years in comfort. When properly cared for, cats often live well into their late teens, and sometimes into their early twenties. Typically, they will remain active and even playful throughout most of their lives. Some may need a little extra patience while adjusting to a new home, but once they feel safe and secure again, they'll offer years of faithful companionship and unconditional love.

If you have an older cat in your home and are looking for a friend for him or her, another adult cat may be the best choice. Kittens can be too playful and may upset your cat instead of providing companionship. A kitten may cause your resident cat to be more annoyed than amused.

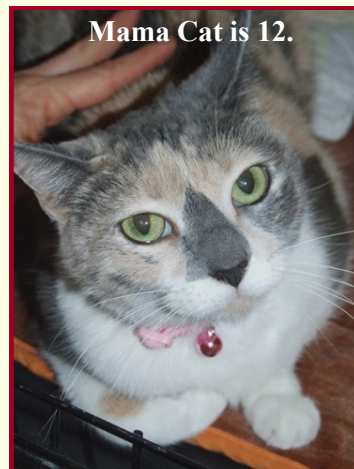

After a long day at the office, you may just want to come home and curl up with your furry friend--but most kittens prefer an action packed evening--lots of tousling, frolicking, and plenty of running and jumping. An adult cat will greet you at the door and be more than happy to curl up and watch your favorite shows on TV. They've already learned about the unconditional love thing.

Adult cats are usually a better choice for families with small children. Kittens often play rough and are constantly underfoot. They're sharp--they can't help it, but kittens are all teeth and claws. Generally speaking, adult cats are more mellow, and often more patient with young children.

Adult cats require less attention and supervision. They're quiet companions. They have well-developed manners, use the litter box and the scratching post without constant reminders.

Many adult cats end up in shelters due to no fault of their own. Separated from their loved ones, surrounded by other cats, confined, confused, and sometimes frightened, many are emotionally devastated by their misfortune. Regretfully, most people gravitate toward the cute, bouncy, big-eyed kittens. Older cats sit by and watch, as one loving family after another passes them over for a cute kitten. Adopting an adult cat is a way to say to a deserving animal "I believe in you."

Mama Cat is 12.

Teddy's Story

by Nancy Arnold

Teddy the cat is proof that cats have nine lives. So far he's survived being a stray, the loss of an eye, three days in intensive care, and a long recovery in his new home.

Teddy's eye is now totally healed and he just has a few whiskers left to grow back. He continues to thrive and feel better every day and has grown more and more confident in his new household. He has full run of the house now. We have tried to teach him a couple of rules, such as kitties don't get on the table or counters, but he quickly informed us that kitties don't do rules. One of his favorite places is on the top shelf of his new cat post which also happens to be close to a corner window so there's a lot to look at.

His favorite napping place is in the corner of the very top of the kitchen cupboards where's there's space between the top of the cupboards and the ceiling. He likes it so much that we have put a bed up there for him.

The loss of his eye is a thing of the past and he has moved on to being a healthy, happy kitty and a wonderful addition to our home. He has tons of kitty energy and enjoys going on evening romps throughout the house - only one broken vase so far. First thing in the morning he can be found lounging on dad's lap while he reads the paper.

Teddy is doing well with the dogs although he watches them very closely. He's not too keen on being herded by the Border Collie, Lily, but we can tell things are relaxing and expect some warming up in the future. He now enjoys sleeping on the dog beds scattered around the house. Luckily, the dogs are magnanimous and freely share with him even if they have to lie on the floor.

Teddy is a charming little fellow and we are really enjoying him. He's a prime example of one of the greatest lessons our animal friends teach us - how to bounce back from adversity and enjoy life. We look forward to having him in our family for many years to come.

Thank you TALGV, for taking care of Teddy and bringing him into our lives.

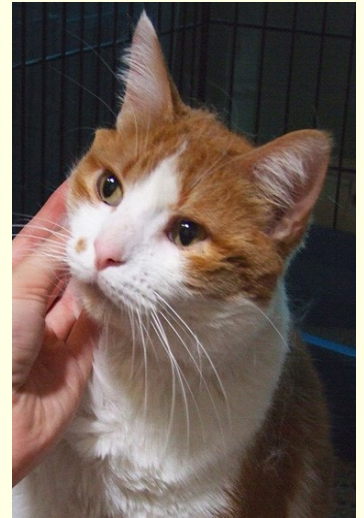

Time spent with cats is never wasted.
